some students take these lectures as useless and not practical, which is the reason why they take part in lectures concerning their own majors. Consequently, they will learn simple skills, their mind will be limited and they will be eliminated against the backdrop of comprehensive development of many fields.

What hides behind the picture is abundantly clear: college students taking part in lectures is of great benefit. Since the university is a place where students are educated and guided into a person of all-round quality instead of merely skill learning, lectures of different fields is beneficial to college students, which exerts positive effects on enhancing knowledge, developing skills of various kinds, and broadening horizons. However, students take part in lectures concerning their own majors as they take these lectures as useless and not pragmatic, which will lead to the fact that they will learn simple skills, their mind will be limited and they will be eliminated against the backdrop of comprehensive development of many fields. For example, Jack Ma focused on the development of multiple fields, including the Internet, e-commerce, advertisement and so forth, and finally created the largest shopping platform online. It is his attention to different fields that made it possible to achieve such success. A well-known saying goes that focus on different fields is the key to success.

2. 现象: 培养好习惯

What hides behind this picture is abundantly clear: great importance should be attached to the development of a good habit. Because the pace of modern life is increasingly fast, it is difficult for individuals to develop good habits, which is of great benefit to finishing tasks on time. Therefore, developing good habits is crucial. If people pay attention to the development of good habits, tasks can be completed in an effective and efficient fashion, avoiding mistakes caused by a shortage of time/a chaotic schedule. For example, Tu Youyou, a famous biologist who won Nobel Prize, planned her schedule in a effective way to finish her study and research. As a result, it is her good habit of planning ahead and completing experiments on time that enables her to discover the medicine which saves millions of people. But for her good habit/planning, she would never have had the opportunity to win the prize. A well-known saying goes that failure to develop a good habit is the stumbling block on the way to success.
